WATERBURY

James House Being Transformed Into Public Library Building.

The James house on Main street, for so many years the residence of Dr. and Mrs. Henry James, and located on the site of the old home of Dr. James' parents, is now in the hands of carpenters, and when the work is finished, Waterbury will possess a fine library building. The plans have been designed by Architect Walker, and John Nelson is in charge of the repairs. The exterior of the home will be changed but little as one approaches from the business part of the town. On the north side, looking towards the meadow, is an addition 16 by 24 feet. This will be the stackroom and will have shelves for 1,000 volumes. The two rooms in the very front of the house, known as the library and parlor, will be reading rooms, and the partitions will be removed. These will contain all the luxuries of the private home, including large fireplaces and magazines and reference books upon low stacks around the edge of the rooms. At the left of the hall a children's reading room, 11 by 14 feet, will be situated, which will have stacks for reference books. This will be separate from the two reading rooms, so as to insure perfect quiet in them at all times. It has even been suggested that the main reading rooms might be used for restrooms. There will be the librarian's room on this floor and the partitions will be removed, so that the librarian, sitting at her desk, can command a full view of the reading rooms and the children's reading room. There will also be a toilet and dressing room on this floor. On the second floor the partition separating the two large bedrooms in the front of the house and over the two reading rooms will be removed. This will be one room, seating from 75 to 100 people. This will be known as the music room or assembly hall, and it is expected that the two-manual organ will be placed here. Directly over the children's room will be the historical room. It will contain many interesting historical relics belonging to Dr. James and it is hoped other collections may be presented from time to time. Off this room will be a committee room. Meetings of the trustees will be held here and it will serve many general purposes. The ell part of the house will be made into a comfortable tenement to accommodate the janitor and family. A modern steam heating plant will be installed and the whole building will be lighted by electricity. The trustees hope to realize an income sufficiently large to keep the library open each afternoon and evening. The library association has bought of Morris Montgomery his interest in the farm, the use of which was willed him by Dr. James. The association now plans to keep the pasture and woodland with the intent to furnish Waterbury with a public park sometime in the future. This splendid building will be a fitting memorial to Dr. and Mrs. Henry James, who believed most thoroughly in the uplift of a community through good literature. The generation who knew them will never forget this and to the younger generation this gift to the town will keep their purpose in mind. Through all, the lives of the donor and those interested with him will be revered.

In the grange and school fair at Duxbury Corners on Columbus day, the Duxbury Corner school secured the largest number of points and will have the picture. The committee also voted to award a prize to the North Duxbury school taught by Miss Lena McGee for the house and furnishings made by her pupils.

Conservation meeting of the Hypatia club will be held Friday of this week with Miss Weltha Boeker.

In behalf of the members of R. B. Crandall post, No. 56, G. R. I. I would thank the managers of the new Park theatre for their courtesy in giving complimentary tickets to old veterans for the play, "The Birth of a Nation," last Saturday. We appreciate the kindly spirit back of this towards the old veterans, and I can assure you that they enjoyed it and thought it magnificent, and it awakened sad memories of scenes of over half a century ago. John W. Averill, Commander.

To all appearances the progress of the typhoid fever epidemic, which was first manifested in Barre and surrounding towns more than a month ago, has been arrested, and the health authorities are confident that no more outbreaks will proceed from the original cause. Health Officer Dr. J. W. Stewart stated this forenoon that only three new cases have been reported to him in the past 12 days. Of the three, one was the case of an infant in a family where the mother contracted the disease several weeks ago, and in two instances the malady is believed to have developed from secondary causes. At the present time several persons are quite dangerously ill of the fever, but in a majority of the cases reported, patients are recovering.

More than 12,000 people saw "The Birth of a Nation" at the new Park theatre last week, according to figures given out by the management this forenoon. This number includes only the actual paid admissions. Crowded houses prevailed at matinee and evening shows throughout the week and a large number of people who applied for seats Saturday afternoon and evening, when the closing performances were given, were told that the house had been sold out. People from outlying towns were liberal patrons of the feature film and the wide spread advertising propaganda which preceded the first appearance of the picture in several large New England cities realized some of its results in the smaller towns, where people arranged with the management of the local theatre for reservations several days ahead. A series of feature films with a list of famous players that include Mary Pickford for the opening started at the Park this afternoon.
